Repetable from the Chiese Met. THE RAIL OF SHIP STATE MAN COMME

CARDINAL MANNING.

Mr T. P. O'Connor in M. A. P. reminds s that one hundred years have elapsed since the birth of Cardinal Manning. In the course of an interesting article he remarks that those who never saw or knew the cardinal would find it hard ever to realise the extraordinary fascination of his personality. The most curious thing about him was that this thorough Englishman, son of a long and unbroken line of Protestants-English to the core, and for a great part of his life a clergyman of the English Church—was more like one of the mediteval saints that the great masters have shown us than any man I ever saw. When you looked at him, you felt just as if he had walked out of one of these pictures and was pretending to be a real being, while, as a matter of fact, he was but a ghost of a portrait and of a long dead and beatified saint. Imagine a man of considerable height very nearly six feet-with a face long as a hatchet, and thin and sharp as a razor; with a great aquiline nose, standing out, and eyes deep-set, watchful, but tranquil and meditative, so devoid of colour-or rather so yellow-parchment like in colouring as to suggest a mummy rather than a living man; put this on top of a body so devoid; of an ounce of visible flesh as to be almost transparent and suggestive so much of skeleton that you expected to hear the bones rattle as he walked; and clothe all this in the typical dress of an ecclesiastic of high station—the purple breaking at the throat the black of the long thin soutane, and the head surmounted by the small purple skull-cap you associate with the saintly dignituries of the Church who have passed beyond these voices-imagine all this, and you have some idea of what Cardinal Manning looked like.

ONE MEAL A DAY. He was doubtless by nature one of those incurably thin men whom nothing could change but, on the other hand, he led a life which was well calculated to preserve this fragility that seemed to make him a being of almost fleshless spirituality, instead of one with the ordinary appetites, desires, and characteristics of the average and normal man. He practically lived on one meal a day, and the meal consisted, believe, mainly of vegetables. For years he was an ardent tectotaller, and preached the gospel to everybody who came within his influence. The curious thing was that this ascetic-with asceticism written in every line of the yellow, razor-like face, was as ardent in his going out among people as the veriest man of the world-as the 2216 greatest grand dame with a salon to maintain. Probably he dined out most nights of the week, but then he always took what little dinner he wanted before he went out, and then toyed with a glass of water throughout the evening, passing by without an effort all the good things, liquid and solid, which tempt the ordinary man at the sumptuous dinner-tables of

LIKE A MESSAGE FROM BEYOND. Though ascetic in appearance and thought, he was not ascetic in the sense of avoiding the great big world and its joys and sorrows, its commerce, intellectual and social, and even political. He was a fairly constant visitor to the Lobby of the House of Commons; if anything serious were going on which affected the interests of his Church, you would be sure to find him there quite constantly. Nowadays he would be probably a member of a Round Table conference in trying to settle the disputes of the sects and the parties with reference to the Education question. Whenever, also, there was a big Labour dispute, he was on the qui vice. He had a firm belief that the true policy of his Church was to ally itself with Democracy; and he had on Labour question opinions so udvanced, that he might well be called a Socialist. It was thus that, when John Burns was engaged in leading the great dock strike, he found in Cardinal Manning one of his most potent allies. At one moment, I heard at the time, it required the voice of Manning to get the dockers to accept the terms which he and Burns had got for them. I have heard an impressive story of the old man standing on an altar, and lifting his skinny hands as though in a combined warning and benediction, adjuring his hearersmostly Irishmen and, therefore, strong Catholics-to listen to his voice, and o course conquering them. And I heard the detail-added that, as he spoke, a say o sunshine gleamed suddenly through the darkness into the little hall or chapel, and D lib up the spare figure with a light that

HOW TO DO MORE BUSINESS.

TANY AMERICANS have built up great commercial enterprises, by the CLIPPING BUREAU: Chinese merchants can do the same if they follow American methods. We clip business news from more than 50,000 papers monthly, and send these items to you while there is good prospect of supplying what is needed and doing

We can send you news and clippings on any line of business, or any subject, and you will be able to know, IN TRUTH, just what American business methods are like, and where there are openings for Chinese merchandise Suppose, for instance, you are a maker of Pottery: our Clipping Bureau might find in some paper an item saying that a big wholesale Pottery concern was being organized in a certain town:—we, of course, would send you that business-hews item, and give you a chance to do business. We can do just the same in any line of business, for there is always something being on that it might pay Chinese merchants to know.

We can supply you with advertisements. of all the great American merchants and manufacturers, so that you may assimilate their ideas and increase your business in China the way we do here.

been read by the Secretary, The Chairman rose and read the halfyearly report. He then said :-- Gentlemen :-- I 'need hardly say that it gives the directors great pleasure to pre; sent the 86th ordinary half-yearly report which I have just read. The statement of assets and liabilities now before you exhibits an active and increasing business and the profit and loss account shows that we have had a satisfactory half year. I think I may count, with confidence, upon your approval of the proposed distribution, viz:--a dividend of £2 per share to be paid, $5 lacs to be added to the Silver Reserve | day. Fund, $21 lacs to be written off Bank Premises a/c, the balance of about $20 lacs to be carried forward to the next half year, or practically the amount brought in | Water Polo Shield Competition. from the previous one. In inviting you to compare the statement of assets and liabilities with that of the 31st December last, I have the satisfaction of being able to point to a growth in the figures under nearly every heading. On the one side we see the large increase of $300 lars in current accounts and fixed deposits, gold and eilver together, and this addition to our operative funds is represented on the other side of the account by a like increase in the total of bills receivable, bills discounted, loans and credits, cash and bullion in hand and in transit. The total assets of the Bank now amount to the large sum of 323 millions of dollars. The high price of money in Europe referred to at the last meeting by my predecessor in the chair is now a thing of the past and it has been succeeded by a period of financial ease and an accumulation of funds waiting employment; this is accounted for to some extent by less money being required to finance our trade owing to the full that has taken place in the price of most products, but is mainly due to a shrinkage of trade throughout the world. It therefore suited the Bank, towards the end of the | follows :half year under review, to hold our bills in London until maturity instead of rediscounting them, and you will observe that the amount of bills rediscounted outstanding is considerably less than the figures shown in previous reports. Outstanding exchange purchases at the end of last half year were based on the then high rates for money ruling in Europe and our accounts benefited accordingly by the heavy fall in the rate of home discounts. Money is also abundant in the chief business centres in China, more especially in Shanghai, where the stock of sycce is abnormally large. In Japan the Japanese Banks have for some time past adopted a conservative The Rest. policy with regard to their advances and money there continues to command high rates. Several of the large manufacturing companies in that country have, however, lately been able to borrow money in Europe and America and this financial help to Japan's productive enterprises cannot fail to have beneficial effects not only on the trade but also on the general finances of the country. India is still suffering from the effects of bad crops and low prices but nevertheless a considerable amount of bar silver was imported by the Bazaar during the half year. These conditions shire. brought about a yery weak exchange market, and to prevent any heavy fall in rates the Indian Government Philadelphia. decided to offer weekly for sale at 1/3 per rupes their sterling demand drafts on London. Latest advices record a siders that the tours of colonial cricket favourable monsoon over the greater part of the country and I trust the result will between visits is thought advisable, and soon be apparent in a renewal of prosperity.

For the first three months of their For the first three months of this in 1910, year the position of the silk market was in a very unsatisfactory condition and at one time a panic in the trade was feared. This was happily averted. In America an improvement in the demand has taken place and in Europe the new season has commenced under favourable auspices; stocks have been considerably reduced but remain sufficiently large to keep prices down to a level that should encourage consumption. In spite of the severe crisis of last senson the total of the combined exports from China and Japan shows that the trade is one which is still on the increase. Some little time ago an American authoress whose name I am afraid have forgotten, discussed the question as to whether or not love-letters should be burnt, in a clever novel entitled "A Gift from the Grave." It tells of a man who for years received letters from i famous weman, though he did not return her love. At length she died and he ultimately fell in love with proceedings of the Dalai Lama at the another woman. The Governor of Shansi has reported to the Peking Government about the daily Wutai mountains. According to H. E. I have always been so enraged by the utterly false picture of Manning that was given in the biography of him by the late Mr Purcell, that I have never read the book itself, though I know its contents from reviews and extracts. I did not know Mr Purcell personally, but I remember him well; and I could not imagine a more unlikely person to write a suitable biography of such a man as Monning. He was a member of the Press Gallery during the Disraeli Parliament between 1874 and 1880, a period during which I was pretty constant attendant of the gallery myself, and I can see his face and figure quite distinctly. He was one of those occasional attendants that were not loved by the regular gallery men. Editor of a weekly paper, he was allowed admission only once a week; but he made up for this somewhat modest allowance of time there by his manner. He has a single eye glass, walked with something of strut, was dressed with great care, and altogether was looked upon as a somewhat pretentious and empty person; and when I heard that this was the man whose pen had represented to the world the saintly Manning as a base and malignant intriguer, felt, inclined to laugh amid my indignatop. It was taking such a man too seriously; there was such disproportion between

. MISTAKEN KINDNESS. And recently I heard a story, which is published, I believe, for the first time, and which throws a peculiar light both on Manning and on his biographer. Purcell was editor of a Catholic weekly-I think it was called the Weekly Register-and somehow or other Purcell managed to convey to Manning the idea either that he had lost the editorship or in some other way had been damaged pecuniarily by Manning's attitude towards this paper. And generous and superscrupulous Manning gave his manuscripts to Purcell as some reparation. "Let him rummage among my old bones," or some such phrase, was the careless, indifferent, and generous way in which Manning alluded to this legacy which was to turn out so disastrously.

the writer and the work he bad undertaken.

and the effect he had produced.

IT IS BETTER SO. ()ne or two other things I must say about this great and good man, who was, in spite of his intense faith in his own Church, a brother of all human beings and an example to all creeds. One of the most pathetic passages I remember in his life was his answer to the friend who called his attention to the fact that the grave of his wife in the little churchyard in Chichester, where he had been an archdeacon and a man with a wife and home, was coverrun with grass and neglected. The answer of Manning was, "Let it-be; it is better so" -an infinitely pathetic farewell by him as a celibate priest to all the associations, even the tenderest, of that other life which he had once led-the life of the majority of his race. Secondly, when his pockets were examined after his death, there were found in them something like one and fourpence. And, finally, here is how he described the coming of death to a friend who visited his deathbed. "Slowing up to the station.

With Eczema on Arm and Legs-Could Scarcely Sleep for Months -Tried Many Treatments Without Result-Did Not Work for II Weeks-Relieved in Ten Days and

"My trouble began with irritation on agony. I was prevented from attending-work,-and-although I was only too pleased to try remedies , suggested by my friends, they were all used without, any effect. I became pessimistic, especially so considering that I had been through the hands of two doctors, who failed to do any good. One day I decided to make any good. One day I decided to make another attempt to get rid of my complaint and purchased a full set of Cuticura Soap. Cuticura Cintment, and Cuticura Pills, and in ten days I found the irritation disappearing. I would not have believed it possible for any remedy to afford such comfort in so short a time. I was able to sleep at night—a thing which I had not been able to do for months—and in the course of another week there were uncourse of another week there were unmistakable signs of the eczema being mastered. I persovered with Cuticura, and in six weeks, using two supplies. I was cured. I have every reason to be grateful to Cuticura, for I was able to return to work after eleven weeks' idleness.
